But the mothers will not see that anything is the matter with their children until the time to change has gone by. This strange obsession of mothers that their children are not like other children is the real reason why mothers are so careless about protecting their daughters, and why they fail so signally to teach their girls the things they should know about life. There is no woman who is old enough to have daughters who does not know witfalls in which other young feet they should know about life. There is no woman who is old enough to have daughters who does not know the temptations that assail a girl, and the ititalis that lie in wait for her feet. There is no mother who could not give the wisest and most helpful advice to her neighbor's daughter, and who could not present the girl across the street with a perfect code of conjust that would insure her safety any where if it was carefully followed.

But this same mother will never say two words of real heartfelt counsel to her own daughter because she is so perfectly convinced that her daughter doesn't need it. Mamie Smith may be tempted by the bright lights and the
